UN Peace Operations and International Policing Mar 16 2021 This book addresses the important question of how the United Nations (UN) should monitor and evaluate the impact of police in its peace operations. UN peace operations are a vital component of international conflict management. Since the end of the Cold War one of the foremost developments has been the rise of UN policing (UNPOL). Instances of UNPOL action have increased dramatically in number and have evolved from passive observation to participation in frontline law enforcement activities. Attempts to ascertain the impact of UNPOL activities have proven inadequate. This book seeks to redress this lacuna by investigating the ways in which the effects of peace operations – and UNPOL in particular – are monitored and evaluated. Furthermore, it aims to develop a framework, tested through field research in Liberia, for Monitoring and Evaluation (M&E) that enables more effective impact assessment. By enhancing the relationship between field-level M&E and organisational learning this research aims to make an important contribution to the pursuit of more professional and effective UN peace operations. This book will be of much interest to students of peace operations, conflict management, policing, security studies and IR in general.

The Invisible Wounded Warriors in a Nation at Peace Aug 28 2019 Although there has not been war in Swedish territory for many years, this does not mean that the country has no veterans who have experienced the challenges of war zone deployments or suffer from combat trauma. The Invisible Wounded Warriors in a Nation at Peace gives a rare look at the international operations of the Swedish military, while offering the reader a unique and deeper understanding of life with PTSD. The book uses terms such as moral injury to further describe the complexity. Complex PTSD after deployment in a conflict zone is a uniquely complicated web of problems that can have medical, psychological, moral, existential and spiritual dimensions. The book discusses what this might mean from an identity and pastoral care perspective.

Peace and Reform against War and Corruption. In answer to a pamphlet, written by A. Young, entitled: "The Example of France, a warning to Britain." Second edition Nov 11 2020 Building Environmental Peace Jan 14 2021 "In this era of misinformation, disinformation and fake news, international organizations have an increasingly important role to play as generators, custodians and disseminators of knowledge. Dalmer shows how the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP) is uniquely situated to make a positive global contribution in this regard. She illustrates in well-researched detail exactly how international bureaucracies become 'knowledge actors' and presents the UNEP as an open system that is crucial to the development of environmental peacebuilding. This book is an essential reference for anyone interested in UN knowledge and how this kind of knowledge may help us all save the planet." - Nanette Archer Svenson, Centro de Investigación Educativa (CIEDU), República de Panamá, USA "Conceiving of international bureaucracies as actors in their own right and drawing from organizational theory and international relations literature, Dalmer illustrates their role as producers of new knowledge. With a focus on UNEP and the different environments from which the organization has obtained new insights regarding environmental peacebuilding, the book not only makes a timely contribution, but readers interested in international institutions and environmental studies will find it of great value." - Jutta M. Joachim, Radboud University, Nijmegen, Netherlands

By analyzing the UN Environment Programme's (UNEP's) contribution to peacebuilding, this book aims to show how international bureaucracies develop knowledge and thereby come to matter on the world stage. Portraying UNEP as an open system, it explores how a growing understanding within the Programme of how environmental degradation shapes insecurities and vice versa has motivated its work on peacebuilding. The theoretical part of this book addresses knowledge, open systems, and knowledge creation. It then presents a historical discussion of UNEP's development in an open system context. Finally, it investigates how knowledge emergence on the linkage between the environment, conflicts, and insecurities influenced UNEP's interests and its work on environmental peacebuilding. Natalia Dalmer is a researcher at the Institute of Political Science at Leibniz University Hannover, Germany. She works on international bureaucracies, knowledge, and environmental politics.--

Gendered Agency in War and Peace Dec 13 2020 This book examines how gendered agency emerges in peacebuilding contexts. It develops a feminist critique of the international peacebuilding interventions, through a study of transitional justice policies and practices implemented in Bosnia & Herzegovina, and local activists' responses to official discourses surrounding them. Extending Nancy Fraser's tripartite model of justice to peacebuilding contexts, the book also advances notions of recognition, redistribution and representation as crucial components of gender-just peace. It argues that recognising women as victims and survivors of conflict, achieving a gender-equitable distribution of material and symbolic resources, and enabling women to participate as agents of transitional justice processes, are all essential for transforming the structural inequalities that enable gender violence and discrimination to materialise before, during, and after conflict. This study establishes a new avenue of analysis for understanding responses and resistances to international peacebuilding, by offering a sustained engagement with feminist social and political theory.

The Role of the International Criminal Court in the international peace Jun 26 2019 At the point when numerous legislatures view law and order as an idea as opposed to a commitment, a viable International Criminal Court equipped for getting equity for atrocities and violations against humankind is a higher priority than at any other time. However, the INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT's presentation has come up short. The International Criminal Court has gone under shrivelling analysis from the initial four leaders of its oversight body, the 123-part Assembly of States Parties, following its choice not to explore atrocities and violations against humankind in Afghanistan [1]. The censure, which came as an article distributed by the Atlantic Council, is exceptional yet not ridiculous. In numerous contentions all throughout the planet, armed forces or renegade gatherings assault customary individuals and submit awful denials of basic freedoms against them. Regularly, these violations are not rebuffed by the public courts. In any case, since July 2002, we have a worldwide court for such violations. The International Criminal Court (ICC) is a lasting global council made for the arraignment of wrongdoings against humankind, decimation, and atrocities. The International Criminal Court is as of now during the time spent setting up its first cases and is situated in The Hague. For more, please visit www.eiir.eu
